Teraqua

Teraqua is a new style developed by SWT in response to market demand. What is Teraqua? Ceramics and tiles are two materials that are frequently used in the construction industry and have long been produced in a variety of sizes, either manually or in a factory. Product sizes are increasing on a daily basis. Preventing cutoffs in the ceramic pattern is one of the reasons for the size increase, and this alone improves the space's appearance and sense of luxury. Currently, size increases are available in slabs and in 150x300 and other sizes. Slabs are high-priced goods with high installation and transportation costs. Given the above-said requirements, we set out to design and produce Teraqua. This product, which is available in ceramic tiles measuring 80x120 (and soon in other sizes as well), is made so that each tile's randomly applied pattern carries over into the color and pattern of adjacent ceramic tiles. The slab pattern will be applied based on the dimensions of the desired space. As a result, it will be more beautiful than other regular slabs, and customers will benefit from a reasonable price, simple application, and ease of transportation.
