PCeramics have been used by humans for thousands of years, e.g. As a material for coating, containers, containers, technical or medical purposes. But above all, as a cultural heritage in the field of art and aesthetics. There is practically no more creative building material than ceramic tiles: thanks to the infinite colors, shapes and patterns, every imaginable style can be realized.

BALO GRAY

Rectified edges permit an elegant, slim joint which, when combined with large formats, generates a particularly expansive and homogenous effect. In everyday applications, tiles with edge lengths of up to 120 cm are currently of relevance. For example: formats such as 60 x 120 cm, as they can be realised with justifiable financial and technical effort.

Large formats can also be used effectively in small areas. The old rule "small rooms, small forms - large rooms, large formats" is outdated at the same time: large formats give a particularly calm degree of clarity to smaller rooms and areas such as guest toilets, wardrobes, corridors or landings. This effect can be achieved by placing large formats seamlessly in rooms in an attractive way.

Light, color and surface merge to create a uniform sense of space. The more daylight that flows into the bathroom, the more generously you can experiment with dark lights. Dark and matte colors make the room look smaller while bright and shiny colors make your bathroom look bigger. Tall rooms with dark ceilings appear lower, while very narrow bathrooms are given pleasing proportions when they have a dark back wall.

BONJU BLACK

Tiles laid vertically are offset as half-lengths or even as a third-height variant. This pattern adds a subtle twist to plain tiles

Various types of tile templates offer endless possibilities for design. For example, horizontal formats can work real miracles in narrow rooms. Emphasize the walls using horizontal stripes, borders or colorful areas. Horizontal strips and rectangular formats add optical width to rooms, while vertical formats are a good choice for low-height rooms. The striped appearance creates a dynamic that draws the eye upwards and gives the impression of room height.

A classic among tile decors: cut from floor tiles, cut decors are perfectly coordinated between the floor and the wall. Porcelain stoneware decor is suitable not only for placing on the wall but also on the floor, for example. In the bathroom. Our practical cutting decor mats in dimensions 60x120 cm can be cut as desired and arranged in stripes, for example.

The same effect can be achieved with the use of colors: warm colors instill a sense of security, while cool colors and pastel shades ensure depth and optical clarity. Light natural colors are especially suitable in combination, as they exude an endless elegance and form the ideal basis for individual highlights.

Those who enjoy playing with decorative elements should design the walls and floors with subtle colors to match. Different colors of equal intensity and finely graded color highlights work well together. A wide selection of decorative tiles and mosaics help to relax larger areas. But beware: while large rooms can handle strong patterns, they can easily look too stuffy in smaller bathrooms. So they should be limited to decorative highlights behind the vanity or in a niche.

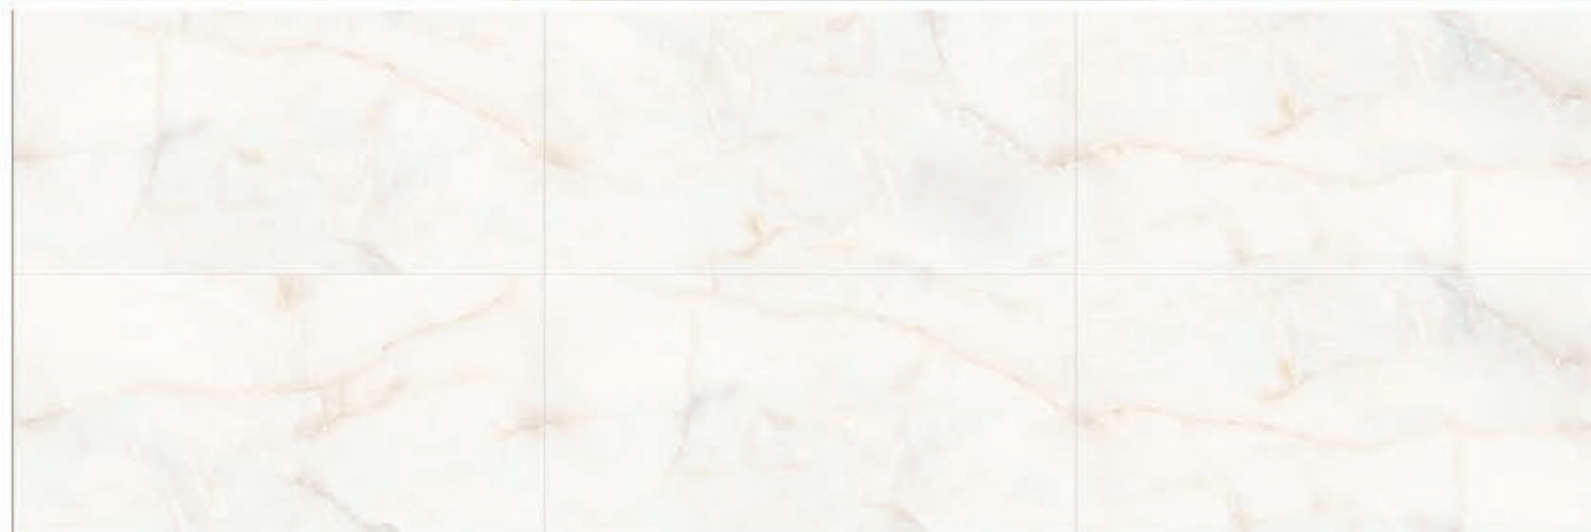

PAVARES

Golden details and structured surfaces in the bathroom become real highlights when placed in the right light. Shiny colors and metallic highlights need a lot of light to reflect their brilliance into the room. Surfaces are best displayed when exposed to light falling from the side. Integrated points in the ceiling or lighting strips in the wall niche are very suitable for achieving such light beams. or daylight! PAVARES

The size and color of the joints, as well as the final format and shape of the tile, also determine the effect inside the room. Contrasting joints emphasize individual tiles, while matching joints and tiles ensure visually consistent surfaces. This attractive space is not only attractive in small rooms.

Ceramic floors are relatively easy to care for – especially glazed tiles, which have a hard protective top layer that makes them impervious to water and most stains. This is the main reason why tiles are preferred for wet areas such as bathrooms, kitchens and laundry rooms. Dirt, stains, and liquids stick to the surface, allowing you to easily wipe or remove them.

VETSAR

Teraqua

While some tiles retain heat fairly well, all tiles freeze in cold weather, which can be a shock to toes first thing in the morning or an unpleasant reality on bare feet in the bathroom. The only way to deal with cold tile is with in-floor heat, either electric mats under the tile or radiant heating under or under the floor.
